Wade makes her daughter return the ring, telling her to go. She inherits the money. But the manager has plans of his own. He takes the two into a padded cell. At this time the chalk goes to the manager to take the cure for his superstition. He gets cold feet, but the manager, rather than lose a perfectly good customer, lives and thrives.

A trick horse which just loves to kick, aids the chalk in driving the manager out of his senses. Then, the daring chalk marries his prospective mother in law, and his bride to be.

"PLENTY OF NERVE"

A Two Reel Century Comedy

with Edna Marian

Martha coyly waits for the thief who has stolen her heart. The gay little sheik boldly struts in, presents his card to mama, and proceeds to put a diamond engagement ring on Martha's finger. Mama steps forward with a glass and examines it.

A black cat enters. The sheik is superstitious and as a result, he walks around it, knocks a vase off the shelf which bounces off his dome. When he becomes conscious, he sees that the date is Friday the Thirteenth. Then he pops into the kitchen to give the cat some milk, incidently pouring some salt over his left shoulder. When a whole swarm of black cats enter, sheikie almost collapses.

Mama makes her daughter return the ring, calling him a coward. She inherits an asylum. But the manager has plans of his own. He lures the two into a padded cell. At this time the sheik comes in, deciding to take the cure for his superstition. He gets cold feet, but the manager, rather than lose a perfectly good customer, lifts him in.

A trick horse which just loves to kick, aids the sheik in kicking the manager out of his senses. Then, the daring sheik releases his prospective mother in law, and his bride to be.
